The Eyes of Fire

A.N. If you haven't read the second book, this story would spoil everything so, get out!

One day, Samuel E. Birkswagger was walking down the street after reading "Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets." It was a dull, gray day and the only reason he went outside was because his drunk parents were trying to hurt him. It made him sad to see kids playing catch with their dads or making cookies with their mom. It started to rain. Then he saw a happy, giggling girl with her mom walking to their porch sharing an umbrella. He couldn't take it anymore! He decided he had to run away. It might have been the sight of happy, giggling girls with their moms or the thought of his parents killing him after drinking 2 cans of beer and 3 bottles of wine that made him run away. By the way, his parents love to get drunk together. When he would run away, he didn't want to go to a perky "kid shelter," he wanted to rough it, live like a castaway. It started to get dark. Then, all of a sudden, it got pitch black. That was weird! Then, Samuel thought he was seeing things. Seeing yellow dots. But then he noticed those weren't dots at all. Those were eyes. Firey eyes. Playful eyes. Dancing eyes. Eyes of no fear. Those were the eyes of a killing beast. Samuel thought and thought about what animal (if it was an animal) had big almond shaped eyes.

Sorry, I need to step in and say something, by the way, if you haven't noticed, Samuel does not care if the animal kill him or not, but if the animal does kill him, he would like to know what animal killed him. The reason he doesn't care if the animal kills him or not is if the animal does not kill him he would probably be murdered by his parents anyway. I'm leaving now.

Then Samuel remembered what he had just read in Harry Potter. The animal he was looking at was a Basilisk. But why wasn't he dying? Maybe he was already dead!? Samuel muttered to himself for a few minuets and then he acted crazy. The Basilisk didn't kill him because it wanted him to die a more painful way...

A.N. Sorry to all the people who wanted to read more about Harry and the gang, the next chapter I write is going to be jam packed with Harry, etc. Samuel is my creation, The Chamber of Secrets is J.K. Rowling's creation, yada, yada, yada. Oh yea, I'm a creation of myself.
